Accessing Films on Demand

Access to Films on Demand (and other library resources) is through the UNM-Taos Library web page http://taos.unm.edu/library.

- Click on Research Databases (in the sidebar or in the center of the page)
- Arrow down to the end and click on Main Campus Databases.
  - The page will open to a search for the Branch offerings, but you can also access the Main Campus Databases.
- Click on Titles to search in the Main Campus Databases.
- The list is alphabetical, so click on F, then on the Films on Demand link.
- Sign in with your NetID and password (this is necessary for all databases when you are off campus, and for any databases that are only subscribed to by Main Campus.)
- Search for your title. In some cases, you will need to watch segments.
  - You can also search by subject.
- If you are unable to access Films on Demand after entering your NetID and password, please contact the Library staff.

What is Films on Demand?

Films on Demand is a subscription database of streaming content, mainly educational in nature. It is produced by Infobase, an educational solutions company providing award-winning digital reference content to the school and library markets, with research databases, eBook collections, streaming video, and eLearning Modules spanning a variety of core subject areas and grade levels.

UNM Taos patrons can access through Main Campus, using netID and password.

Technical difficulties can be caused by Adobe Software: check for popups that are preventing your content from streaming.
